All aboard! Welcome to the 38th Annual Colorado TESOL Convention! We are excited to begin Riding the Rails of Engine-unity through the ever-challenging and invigorating Colorado educational landscape with our presenters, featured speakers, and of course, you, our dedicated convention participants.

This year our featured speakers will continue to address various strategies and techniques that support linguistic and culturally diverse populations in unique and ingenious ways. From critical pedagogy, social justice, and 21st century skill-building to reading strategies, collaborative online-learning, and the use of improv in the language learning classroom, there’s sure to be something new for everyone.

Registration will begin shortly before 8:00 both Friday and Saturday with coffee and breakfast rolls served in the exhibitors’ room until high noon. Our first plenary speaker on Friday, Dr. Eileen Ariza, will impart to us the necessity for careful cross-cultural communication at 8:45 with breakout sessions underway shortly after 9:00.

CoTESOL’s Special Interest Groups (SIG) have orchestrated focused sessions for everyone on how to utilize innovative strategies in language classrooms. Be sure to look for these featured presentations as you plan your conference schedule. Also, we hope you will stay for the Friday evening entertainment organized by our Hospitality and Entertainment Liaison, Dieter Bruhn. This year we are pleased to have performers from the Central City Opera presenting “How the West Was Sung” beginning at 5:00 p.m. in the Jefferson Ballroom. Events will continue on Saturday starting with our morning plenary speaker, Susan Gaer. She will focus on implementing 21st century skills into language education.

A special thank you goes out to the CoTESOL Board for their passionate and unwavering commitment to the values and goals of this affiliate. Conversations and decision-making throughout the year are what make the convention such a success, and Larry Fisher, the Executive Secretary, is the lynchpin to our continued growth. It is his dedication and vision that keep us moving forward. Hilario Benzon and Christine Deines, Communications Liaisons, keep the Colorado community informed with their newsletters, and our Publishers’ Liaison, Bruce Rogers, makes sure that our exhibitors are a central part of our convention. Finally, your continuous support of CoTESOL provides the motivation to continue working towards an ever stronger convention. Thank you, Colorado community, for keeping us on course as we ride into another year.

We look forward to seeing you!

Kind regards,

Sarah Austin             Chris Tombari             Jennifer Shank

Credit Options Available to CoTESOL Conference Participants Through the University of Colorado Denver

This year CoTESOL conference attendees have the opportunity to register for one of three credit options through UC Denver’s School of Education & Human Development. The options are:
* Attend both conference days; register for/earn a 1.5 CEU (Continuing Education Unit); cost of $48
* Attend one conference day; register for/earn .5 CEU; cost of $20;
* Attend both conference days, register for and earn one (1) University Graduate credit; cost of $75

Any of the options can be applied towards re-certification or other credentials or programs, depending on the individual attendee’s specific district/program requirements (e.g., for Highly Qualified Teacher). Teachers are encouraged to check with their respective district’s policy in making their choice. Some advising/assistance will also be available on site at the conference.

Contact CPE@ucdenver.edu or call 303-315-4985 for more information after September 1.
SUMMARY:

Usually everyone who teaches English language learners has undergone a training program to learn about language acquisition, linguistics, bilingualism, and the various methodologies of language teaching and learning. Cultural training is touched on, but the most important aspect that makes us good teachers is our own experiences of cross cultural mis/understanding that arise within any cultural interactions, and the actions/reactions that manifest themselves, especially in the classroom. She will be speaking about the importance, significance, and benefits of enhancing your own cultural experience as it adds to the understanding of students, and how it sheds light on why students behave and respond as they do. Cultural understanding speaks volumes in terms of student interaction and adds a whole new meaning to the concept of cross-cultural competence.

BIO:

Dr. Eileen N. Whelan Ariza is a professor at Florida Atlantic University in Boca Raton, Florida, USA. She received her doctorate in multilingual/multicultural education at the University of Massachusetts, Amherst; a master’s degree in TESOL, Spanish as a second language, and bilingual education at the School for International Training in Brattleboro, Vermont; and a bachelor’s degree in elementary education (summa cum laude) at Worcester State College, Worcester, MA. Before moving to Florida, Dr. Ariza was a Teaching Fellow in the English Language Institute at Harvard University, and taught English-language learners in Mexico, Colombia, Ecuador, Puerto Rico, Costa Rica, Nicaragua, Brazil, Spain, and the Philippines. Dr. Ariza’s involvement in the Fulbright programs includes a 2008/2009 Fulbright award as García Robles scholar at La Universidad de las Americas in Puebla, Mexico; Fulbright Ambassador for fall 2013 - summer 2015; Fulbright Peer Reviewer (TEFL) 2014-2015; Senior Specialist Roster Reviewer 2008-2010; and candidate on the Fulbright Specialist Roster, 2010-present.
SUMMARY:
By teaching both the English language and a “buffet” of reading strategies, we guide students toward becoming strategic readers and critical thinkers—a gift they can take with them, one that contributes to their success in both other classes and their work life. But which strategies should we focus on in academic ESL classes? When there seem to be so many strategies and such limited class time, how can we prioritize? When evidence increasingly points to the importance of vocabulary, how can we apply new research from corpus linguistics? This presentation will discuss how teachers can make best use of a skills-based textbook and also go beyond the book, without having to sacrifice weekends to lesson planning. A handout will be provided.

BIO:
After studying TESL at UCLA, Pamela Hartmann joined the Peace Corps, through which she taught EFL at Seoul National University and Sogang University in Korea and then moved to Greece to teach for another year in the American Community Schools of Athens. She returned to California, where she taught at UCLA (the American Language Center), USC, Santa Monica College, West Los Angeles College, Pepperdine University, and for thirty years in the Intensive English Program at Evans Community Adult School in the Los Angeles Unified School District.

She has authored or co-authored ELT textbooks for McGraw-Hill, Cambridge University Press, Heinle & Heinle, National Geographic Learning, and Longman/Pearson. As a textbook author, she is a member and past chair of the Materials Writers Interest Section in TESOL.

In recent years, her interest has focused on the teaching of vocabulary and on the benefits of using authentic content in ELT textbooks. She has given workshops, presentations, or plenaries on these topics at colleges and universities in the United States, Japan, Korea, Thailand, Taiwan, Puerto Rico, Costa Rica, and Peru, as well as at TESOL, CATESOL (California), JALT, KOTESOL, MEXTESOL, and ASOCOPI (Colombia).

Where do we get on the critical train to re-engineer TESOL?

A Whistle-Stop Tour of Critical Pedagogy

Friday, November 14, 2014 | 1:30 - 2:15 PM | Jefferson

SPONSORED BY: CoTESOL

SUMMARY:
The critical language pedagogy train left the station a long time ago, but a lot of people on the mainline don’t know about it. Luckily it’s a slow, stopping train — you can get on the train to social justice in language teaching at many different stops. In this overview of practice elements in this perspective on education in general and language teaching in particular, the presenter will review materials and curricular options, as places to get on board with this line, along with the basic teacher orientation (a critical consciousness) and the longer-term implications of getting on the critical pedagogy train.

BIO:
Dr. Graham Crookes is a member of the graduate faculty of the Department of Second Language Studies, teaching courses and seminars in second language learning and teaching pedagogy and theory, e.g., practice teaching supervision (practicum), "innovative"/alternative approaches (including critical pedagogy), second language program administration; classroom research, etc.; occasionally teaching EAP courses in the English Language Institute; conducting workshops both locally (for Hawai‘i Department of Education teachers) and internationally, for second language specialists.

Shaping how we learn – 21st Century Skills

Saturday, November 15, 2014 | 8:45-10:00 AM | Jefferson

SPONSORED BY: Pearson ELT

SUMMARY:
The industrial revolution is over. Bloom’s taxonomy has changed. We are well into the 21st century, but how much has learning changed over all this time? How can we help our students achieve success in the 21st century and beyond? Susan Gaer will discuss the paradigm shifts in education from the significant change to Bloom’s taxonomy in the 1990s to the flipped learning perspective of today. She will share examples of student interactions using tools such as Socrative, Quizlet and the Google Drive. While formal education has changed little over the last 100 years, the tools we use have evolved dramatically from the blackboard, to computers, and now mobile devices. By gaining a better understanding of current learning ideas and technology, we can take our students into the next century.

BIO:
Susan Gaer has worked as an ESL teacher since 1980 and currently teaches at the Santa Ana College School of Continuing Education. She is an avid user of technology and trains teachers online for TESOL and the Outreach Technical Assistance Center (OTAN). Susan is a frequent conference presenter, showcasing the use of technology with adult learners from the literacy level through transition to college. She has co-authored books and teacher’s manuals, served on the executive boards for CATESOL (California Teachers of English to Speakers of Other Languages) and TESOL, and contributed to standing committees for professional development and technology. Susan holds a master’s degree in English with emphasis in TESOL from San Francisco State University and a master’s degree in Educational Technology from Pepperdine University. She is currently the Nominating Committee Chair for TESOL.

A Comedian’s Classroom: Interpersonal Skills Through Improv

Friday, November 14, 2014 | 2:30 – 4:15 PM | Conifer

Sponsored by: CoTESOL’s Content Area Special Interest Group

ABSTRACT:
Improv comedians rely on excellent communication and teamwork to create on-the-spot comedy. To gain these skills, comedians use a series of games which build memory, concentration, and nonverbal communication. This comedian-led session demonstrates these games while explaining why they build essential classroom and interpersonal skills for language learners.

BIOs:
Jesse Greaves-Smith received his masters in curriculum and instruction from the University of Denver, where he founded and coached Skintight Outrage, the DU Improv Comedy team. He has been in numerous house teams and shows at the Bovine Metropolis Theater in Denver, where he can currently be seen most weeks in GleeProv, the improvised high school musical. For nine summers he has designed the outdoor education curriculum for the local Boy Scout council. He focuses on using his comedy and Scouting experience to enhance learning in his science classroom in an at-risk, multilingual, charter school in Lakewood, CO.

Teaching for Social Justice: Building Schools, Critical Pedagogy, and Urban Education

Saturday, November 15, 2014 | 9:15 – 11:00 AM | Spruce

SPONSORED BY: CoTESOL’s Intensive English Program/Higher Education Special Interest Group

ABSTRACT:
In this Higher Ed forum, our three highly esteemed guests will be invited to introduce language learning and teacher education within a critical pedagogic framework and to debate the significant work that language educators need to do today to prepare students to take control of their lives through active citizenship. Questions to be discussed may include:

- What does it mean to teach for social justice, and why does it matter?
- What are the goals of our language programs today, and what possibilities are there for schools of the future?
- How can transforming language pedagogy help to transform lives?

After the invited guests introduce themselves, describe their values and beliefs about education, and briefly discuss core issues involving education for social justice, the audience will be invited to join in the discussion.

Cross-Cultural Mis/Communication with English Learners: A Matter of Life or Breath

Usually everyone who teaches English language learners has undergone a training program to learn about language acquisition, linguistics, bilingualism, and the various methodologies of language teaching and learning. Cultural training is touched on, but the most important aspect that makes us good teachers is our own experiences of cross cultural mis/understanding that arise within any cultural interactions, and the actions/reactions that manifest themselves, especially in the classroom. The presenter will be speaking about the importance, significance, and benefits of enhancing your own cultural experience as it adds to the understanding of students, and how it sheds light on why students behave and respond as they do.

Reading Strategies and Skills: A Moveable Feast

By teaching both the English language and a “buffet” of reading strategies, we guide students toward becoming strategic readers and critical thinkers—a gift they can take with them, one that contributes to their success in both other classes and their work life. But which strategies should we focus on in academic ESL classes? When there seem to be so many strategies and such limited class time, how can we prioritize? When evidence increasingly points to the importance of vocabulary, how can we apply new research from corpus linguistics? This presentation will discuss how teachers can make best use of a skills-based textbook and also go beyond the book, without having to sacrifice weekends to lesson planning. Shaping How We Learn—21st Century Skills

The industrial revolution is over. Bloom's taxonomy has changed. We are well into the 21st century, but how much has learning changed over all this time? How can we help our students achieve success in the 21st century and beyond? Susan Gaer will discuss the paradigm shifts in education from the significant change to Bloom's taxonomy in the 1990s to the flipped learning perspective of today. She will share examples of student interactions using tools such as Socrative, Quizlet and the Google Drive. While formal education has changed little over the last 100 years, the tools we use have evolved dramatically from the blackboard, to computers, and now mobile devices. By gaining a better understanding of current learning ideas and technology, we can take our students into the next century.

Educational Innovation: Action Research and Political Realities
A ten-year action research project grounded in a school-university partnership has accompanied transformation changes in a high school serving a high proportion of English language learners. Reciprocal processes of inquiry and decision-making, and changes in practice and policies have prompted adjustments in research questions and, ultimately, assumptions about teaching and learning.

In many schools across our state and nation, the population of English Language learners continues to grow. The CLD program will provide you with the knowledge and classroom skills needed to meet the diverse language and academic needs of these learners.

The TESOL certificate will prepare you to teach English as a foreign language in international settings or as a second language in domestic settings.

- The TESOL Certificate can be completed in two semesters, the CLD Endorsement in four semesters, and the CLD MAT in seven semesters.
- A new online cohort starts every Fall.
- The CLD Endorsement may lead to a graduate level TESOL Certificate with one more course
